Supported growth

Research shows that for women's development, support is equally important as learning new skills. A strong support structure during and after the programme includes professional coaching, and powerful connections with peers and the AWDT Escalator Alumni.

Who is an Escalator woman?

An Escalator woman is defined by her desire to lead and contribute rather than her career or position. She has invested significant time and energy into her community, business or career and wants to develop her skills. She may be a grass-roots farmer, a community-minded contributor or employed by a large company.

Personal stories from AWDT Escalator Alumni can be found at www.awdt.org.nz/programmes/escalator
Or contact us and we'll connect you with an Alumni member who can share her experience of the programme.
