

GENERATION CHANGE

Young women, bringing purpose to food & fibre

The primary sector of the future, and the whenua, water and people it is built on needs new ideas. It needs need innovators and visionaries. We need collaborators, scientists, and kaitaki. We need people driven by purpose.

But we get it. As a young woman in tertiary study or training, finding the first step to meaningful work can be hard.

That's why we're delivering Generation Change – a one day workshop and mentoring programme to help you bring your true self to the sector.

It's about answering the hard questions that matter. What do you stand for? What does impact mean to you? What's step one?

By connecting with your values, strengths and purpose, walk forward with the first draft of your career roadmap and one progressive food and fibre leader as a mentor.

AT GENERATION CHANGE

- Reflect – Connect with your personal values, strengths and purpose.
- Plan – Describe what meaningful work feels like to you and design an action plan to realise it.
- Be inspired – Learn about positive impact in our changing world from food and fibre leaders.
- Connect – Cultivate your network of primary sector people and connect with your mentor.

"This careers advice has well and truly trumped any other advice that I have ever received."
